THE HOLY FATHERS OF THE 7TH ECUMENICAL COUNCIL

From the Prologue of St. Nikolai Velimirovich

The Seventh Ecumenical Council was held in 787 at Nicaea during the reign of the devout Empress Irene and her son, Constantine, in the time of Patriarch Tarasius. This Council finally confirmed the veneration of icons, justifying it by Holy Scripture, by the witness of the Holy Fathers, and by the undeniable example of miracles manifested through the holy icons. Adding to examples of miracles previously cited, Bishop Constantine of Cyprus recounted this: One day, a certain shepherd from the town of Constantia drove his flock to pasture, and there saw an icon of the Most-holy Theotokos, all decorated with flowers by the faithful. "Why render so much honor to a rock?" said the shepherd, who had obviously been brought up in iconoclasm. He struck the icon with his iron shepherd's cane, and damaged the right eye of the image of the Mother of God. As soon as he turned away, he stumbled over that same cane and gouged out his own right eye. Thus injured, he returned to the city, crying out tearfully that the punishment of the Theotokos had befallen him. This Council also decreed that the holy relics of a martyr be placed, without fail, in the Antimension. Three hundred and sixty-seven Fathers participated in this Council. May the Lord also have mercy on us and save us by their prayers.

GREECE'S HIGHEST COURT SAYS CREMATION LEGAL

The Associated Press – Friday, September 26, 2008

ATHENS, Greece: Greece's highest court has approved a government petition to legalize cremation, as well as a list of guidelines on how the ashes may be scattered by relatives.

The country's powerful Orthodox Church opposes cremation, arguing it is contrary to the notion of the resurrection of the dead. But a high court, the Council of State, ruled Friday that an executive order from the government allowing cremation is legal.

It also approved guidelines on where ashes can be scattered: at least 1.5 nautical miles from the shoreline, outside inhabited areas, or in gardens and fountains that will be built at crematoriums.

SOME INSTRUCTIONS OF ST. TIKHON OF ZADONSK

Seek a blessing from God when eating and drinking

When you wish to eat or drink, call on the Name of the Lord and ask for a blessing of Him for your food and drink, saying: "Lord, bless!" And then you will taste and enjoy the good things of your Lord. For everything that is God's is good, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof (Psalm 23:1)."

On Clothing

Do not adorn your body with stylish clothes, as some are accustomed to do, but let your clothing be appropriate to your station. A Christian's garment is the clothing of the Spirit. It should adorn the soul and not the body. The beauty of the soul is the image of God in which we were created. Seek this beauty and it shall be enough for you.

On the Conduct of a Pure Heart

Treat every man, not with flattery, but simply, just as you do yourself. As you appear outwardly, be so inwardly as well; and what you say to one person let the same be in your heart also.

NPR.org, October 2, 2008 - There's financial tumult all around and people are thirsty for answers. Across America, religious leaders prophesy and preach about ways to deal with the roller-coaster crisis. And they counsel congregants who have deep questions, unquenchable anxieties.

Trinity Church on Wall Street sits smack dab at the epicenter of the financial cosmos. Brokers, traders and "masters of the universe" fill its pews. The Rev. Anne Mallonee says the Episcopal church — with a 900-household membership — is seeing a definite increase in attendance. Especially on weekdays, when people from the financial district drift in for services, for solace and for solitude.

The church is offering a number of different programs — including extra prayer sessions and career counseling — to help people cope with the great unease. The first wave included support staff, such as secretaries and administrative staffers. "This week we are seeing more executives," she says.

"Someone who was here for 9/11 says this is the closest thing she has seen to that time," Mallonee says.

Feelings Of 'Fear And Distrust'

Across the country at the Parkrose Community United Church of Christ in Portland, Ore., the Rev. Chuck Currie has noticed that his congregation is rife with "fear and distrust of leaders." He tries to calm the flock by saying: "Ultimately, our hope rests with God." But, he adds, "economic problems are moral problems and how we respond speaks about our relationship with God and to the world."

Parkrose is no megachurch. With 114 members, it's a small house of worship in a modest neighborhood of low-income and elderly people. "We have a responsibility," Currie says, "to care first for those Jesus called the 'least of these' in society: the poor, homeless, sick, children and the elderly."

Responding To 'Doom And Gloom'

The Rev. Ted Bobosh of St. Paul the Apostle Orthodox Church in Dayton, Ohio, says members of his congregation are fretful about their future. "Their investments and retirement funds are shrinking rapidly. Some are worried that the bottom is going to fall out of the system and people are going to lose their homes," he says.

St. Paul is part of the Orthodox Church in America, a sister group of the Russian Orthodox Church. "I think the situation is exacerbated by the constant doomsday negativity of the presidential campaign," Bobosh says. The message "is doom and gloom — 'be afraid' if the other guy is elected." Such relentless Chicken Little rhetoric is unsettling, Bobosh says, "because doing something or doing nothing has equal chances of real failure and either candidate might lead us into disaster." And, he adds, "the campaign makes it out as if you — the voter — are personally responsible if the other guy gets elected for the doom we face. I just think it weighs heavy on everyone's heart."

To lighten those hearts, Bobosh counsels his members to pray, "to put their trust in God. I do not promise them that prayer guarantees success. It only grounds us in God, which is our only defense for whatever happens — disaster or prosperity."

The Financial Impact

The current meltdown comes at an especially inopportune time — stewardship season. Many churches calculate their finances according to the calendar year, and the first of October traditionally marks the time when preachers are talking about money anyway. On any given Sunday, you are liable to hear the pastor refer to the Apostle Paul, who quotes Jesus as saying: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

This year there may be some blowback. "Funny enough, our 'Pledge Sunday' is this week," says Chuck Currie. Pledge Sunday is when people tell the church how much they plan to give in the coming year. The church then plans its budget according to the pledges. What people feel like they can pledge in the middle of this monetary mess, says Currie, "will sure be an indicator of how people are feeling and where we are headed." The church has faced financial problems for years, he says. "A downturn in pledges could be a disaster."

FOR CONSIDERATION

From the Prologue of St. Nikolai – October 11th

As, by God's providence, the power of healing is given to blessed water and oil, so these same powers are given to icons. One marvelous example of the wonderworking power of holy icons is cited by St. Athanasius the Great. In the town of Beirut there lived a Christian in a rented house. Moving from this house, he left behind by mistake an icon of the Savior. A Jew moved into the same house. There were many Jews in that house, and they were particularly ill-disposed towards the Christian Faith. When the icon was found, the Jews carried it to their meeting-place and began to mock it, as their forbearers had once mocked the living Savior. The Jews did to the icon as their forbearers had done to Him: they pierced the feet and hands with nails, put vinegar on the icon's lips and, in all possible ways, mocked the Savior's face. Finally, one of them took a spear and pierced the divine image under the rib. And, wonder of wonders, blood and water flowed from the pierced spot as it had aforesaid from the body of the crucified Lord. The fear and horror of the Jews was indescribable. Then they found a vessel in which to catch the blood, and brought many of the sick – the blind, deaf, lame and mad, who, as soon as they were anointed with that blood, were healed. The whole town gathered to see the miracle, and all glorified Christ our God. All the Jews in the town came to belief in Christ, the living and life-giving Lord.
